Course Description

For the second year, Carihi is offering a Forestry Education Program using 21st Century learning strategies (project/student inquiry based), that will see students learning outside of the traditional classroom. This course builds employable skills by using a hand’s on approach that will educate students on BC’s largest natural resource. Through participation in this half day course, students will receive 8 school credits (science/elective). The goal of this program is to provide opportunities to create more connections within the school, and illustrate different career opportunities while ultimately enhancing learning.

Currently there is planning underway to potentially develop two forestry classes, grade 11 and 12. The grade 11 option would be similar to the current course, and would be a prerequisite for the grade 12 course. Through partnership with North Island College this course would allow students to receive school credits, numerous field certificates, and college credits at no cost. Contact coordinator and instructor Jason Kerluck at Carihi if you have questions about the Carihi Forestry Education Program, or if you can help support this exciting opportunity.
